Act on Customers' Behalf - Andrew, you exhibit a great amount of curiosity, which is a wonderful trait for a design leader. You're curious about why we do things, about what problems we're trying to solve, and about how something will help our customers (external customers, or internal employees). (Year-end) This may be a strength to lean into - one of your colleagues mentions "Given how our org works on many competing projects and parallel tracks, Andrew may benefit from a deeper understanding of the roadmaps and plans across all teams, in order to generalize across the VDS needs."

Create and Drive Change - I don't think i've ever seen you resistant to change - even when i've thrown curveballs at you like standing up a data analytics function for the design team! (Year-end) We've recently discussed how VDS can support VBG and the Value organization - and I really appreciate your "Verizon-wide" thinking and leadership in this area.

Deliver Results - You have the VDS team operating as possibly the most smoothly running "product model" team in consumer! I wonder what the digital teams could learn from that! One thing to focus on a little more here - look for opportunities to be more proactive on reading out on progress (regular VDS stakeholder meetings with readouts on adoption for example). (Year-end) You've demonstrated the ability to set up your team to both execute on the immediate work AND to innovate/vision future direction - very impressive! One thing to continue to focus on when communicating progress/value is to keep it connected to "what is the ultimate benefit to the business/customer?" I often find myself asking the helpful question "What would Higgins or Sampath care about?".

Within the Design Systems team I strive to ensure that every project the team takes on is anchored in delivering meaningful value to both our internal VDS customers but also to our external customers through the digital experiences that leverage our systems. I foster collaboration across organizations so that we can deeply understand our customer pain points, gather insights, and design solutions that directly address those needs. I work to align our strategies with what will truly enhance and optimize the customer experience.

To drive innovation I prioritize curiosity and adaptability within my teams. I am constantly challenging them to think differently and explore creative solutions to the problems we face. We lean into experimentation and calculated risk-taking and we constantly look for bold ideas and to push boundaries. I am always trying to toe the line between forward thinking visioning and actionable next steps to ensure we are able to deliver the systems that our users need.

Drive Teamwork - "For the greater good" and "assume positive intent" - two phrases that ring very true for you. (Year-end) You communicate well across the organization - one of your business partners comments "Good communicator and strong partner"

Nurture Development - Nurturing development is also about managing performance, and with the underperforming employee in India you've shown you have the managerial courage to do so.

I do my best to foster an inclusive environment where every voice is valued. I seek out diverse perspectives and work to ensure that different experiences and ideas are represented in our decision-making. I work to ensure my team feels welcomed, respected, and supported to be themselves at work. Through these actions I believe my team can be authentic and contribute meaningfully. To enhance teamwork, I try to be fully transparent and err on the side of overcommunication. I work to create a culture of celebrated success and group recognition but I admit that individual recognition is an area that I can improve in. I try to give of my team to the team equally as needed and provide mentorship and guidance when requested.

Exceeding

Exceeds all or most expectations for leading others according to the V Team Principles and operates with a focus on "how we work."

Comment

Lead with Integrity - I've seen you bring up topics related to fairness and equity, and caring for all members of your team.

Take Responsibility - You own not only the decisions you make, but any failures or mistakes too - and you unpack them, ask for feedback, and learn from them - this is really mature leadership behavior!
(Year-end) You demonstrate good self-awareness and are keen for feedback - frequently asking your peers and partners what you can do to improve.

I do my best to consistently make decisions that align with my values as well as the values of Verizon. Again, I value transparency in communication and ensure that my actions reflect the trust my team gives me.

One of my superpowers is my focus on personal growth and I invest heavily in the growth and development of those around me. I actively create opportunities for my team to stretch their capabilities and encourage them to embrace challenges as pathways for growth and success. I regularly give and seek constructive feedback, while working to ensure the feedback is actionable and framed in a way that motivates progress.

I am very proud of the work my team has done this year and the growth we have seen. I am proud of the time I spent in India in January/February, the myHome/Monarch release in June, the degree to which our team has expanded this year with the introduction of Experience Design Insights and VDS Product Management, and last but not least the celebration of the 5 year anniversary of VDS.
